Mechanical & Electrical

Mechanical Systems

Located in engine bay, Ford Mermaid 150hp 4-cylinder turbo diesel engine. Single lever controls with electric start. Freshwater cooled. Shaft drive to fixed 3 bladed propeller. The engine had a full service in March 2018 by the owner and has been very reliable during her current ownership. This vessel will cruise at 10 knots and has a maximum speed of 12 knots. It has two GRP petrol tanks with a total capacity of 200 litres.

Electrical Systems

1 x 12v Battery charged via engine alternator and solar panel. Electrical distribution panel. NASA BM-1 battery monitoring system. Full cabin lighting.

History & Construction

Channel Island 22 built by Silva Yates (Plastics) Ltd of Jersey to a design by Alan Buchanan (believed to have been built sometime around 1981). Blue GRP semi-displacement hull with white GRP superstructure and decks with moulded non-slip surfaces. Mahogany spray rails along hull and rubber rubbing strake. Aft cockpit. Wheel steering to rudder. Last out of the water in 2017 when anodes were changed and she was antifouled. This vessel is due a re-fit which has been reflected in the price.
